FROM THE COLLEGE FOR CONGREGATION
DEVELOPMENT

“Over the past fifty years, the work of anthropologists, historians, psychologists, sociologists, and pastoral theologians attests to a developmental dynamic within a person’s and a group’s life. That is, their research brings to light what can be observed in the person who moves from disinterested observer to maturing participant and attests to this pattern in other dimensions of life: from novice to elder, from awkward dating to steadfast relationship, from conventional faith to dialectical faith, from new employee to engaged leader. In light of the developmental dynamic that pervades every organism, this model suggest that there can be different degrees of attachment to and support for a congregation.” CCD 2014

The four categories now being considered are:

- ♥ Disinterested observer
- ♥ Sympathetic participant
- ♥ Active supporter
- ♥ Maturing practitioners

An interesting theory that may have application for St. David’s. Watch for more from your Congregational Team: Patti Case, Toby Kevin, Barb Weza, Laurie McClanahan & Judy Ogden.

WEEKLY NEWSLETTER
APRIL 13TH - APRIL 19TH

The passion story isn't just a long one, so rich, so full of both trouble and beauty that we hardly know where to begin. It's also very old, going all the way back to Paul and developing during that first century as the Gospel writers filled out the narrative with both theology and details.

From the very beginning of his Gospel, Matthew has sounded the theme of fulfillment, and he isn't finished yet. As he nears the end of his story, Matthew continues to recall traditions that are being fulfilled, but he's also remembering the blood that was spilled at its very beginning, when the powers-that-be (Herod and the Empire that supported him) killed innocent babies because they feared just one little newborn child. Frederick Niedner writes: "Matthew's Gospel has blood spattered all over it...the Immanuel child who escaped Herod falls victim to a new cadre of frightened leaders." Frightened leaders use fear to control the people, drawing "just enough blood," Niedner says, "to keep everyone afraid."
